Violent storm last night. Tornados in the Lackawanna Vallley.
Torrential rain. Terrifying wind.

Mercifully, all is well at home this morning. We were very lucky.

As if to herald the return to normalcy, on my way into town just now (9 A. M.), I spotted a pair of American Mergansers, floating serenely, in the open water of the reservoir at the intersection of the Crystal Lake Road and Route 106.

Suddenly, everything was back to normal.

Life goes on.

On with the show.
